Christmas Fancies. Oh, sweet are the songs of Christmas

And the chimes are ringing clear,

And grandpa, he's lost in reverie.

For the embers of life are bright.

And whither has fled his rocking-horse.

With its stiff and swinging gott? and where is the drum, that weary drum. That the neighbors searned to hate-

And where are the books, all the dogeared books.
With glants stricting through,
And stories of robbers had and bold
And the Simbad legends true?

He dreams of the trumpets he blew so

All the penny trumpets shrill.

And thinks of his stocking hanging limp
in the kitchen cold and chill.

That night when he kissed her 'neath

Where the mistletoe was hung.

Of the night that she danced the minuet. With a helly sprig in her hair. And pa laid claim to her heart and hand. When they stood on the moonlit stair:
